What's next for Empower Field at Mile High?

The Land Transition

Empower Field at Mile High and its parking lots will revert to the City of Denver once the Broncos leave.

Translation:
It reverts to us.

Housing Potential

Ball Arena & River Mile
Currently indicate housing for 15,000 Denverites, including affordable housing.

Burnham Yard
Plans are unannounced, but assuming housing for 10,000 residents based on site potential.

Our Opportunity

We can demand more than the standard 10% affordable housing mandate.

These massive new developments have the power to completely change Denver for generations to come.

Could 80 Acres in West Denver Become a Dumping Ground Again?

Controlled by Billionaire Families

Two of the wealthiest families in America, with an army of lobbyists, now own this land adjacent to Mile High.

Nearly 300 vs 80 Acres

Ball Arena, River Mile, and Burnham Yards encompass massive parcels that demand community-first vision.

Our Vision: Mile High Park for Denver

The Park Problem: Denver faces a 3,800-acre park deficit over the next decade, according to the Denver Park Trust. Current 10% calculation ignores population density.

The Solution: Conduct community impact analyses and ensure authentic engagement. Rigorous studies on social justice, public health, and climate resilience.

The Impact: Honor heritage along the South Platte River and adjoining public lands. A world-class park for people of all ages to enjoy.

What Can We Do?

Contact the Mayor, your Council members, and candidates for council. Tell them what you'd like to see: A park, not data centers next to the 300 acres being developed by 2 billionaire Walmart families.

Make your voice heard. Join your neighbors in the city and the region.

In the News

City Cast Denver: “What to Do With an Empty Stadium?” exploring park and public use options.

Denver North Star: “Let's turn Mile High Stadium into Mile High Park after the Broncos move.”

FOX31 / KDVR: Coverage of community petition demanding green space over private megaprojects.

Key Takeaway:

“Families, kids, and neighbors should be able to play sports, walk, and enjoy the outdoors in a place that means so much to Denver. To have it become concrete boxes instead of a great park commemorating team history would be a missed opportunity.”

Community Testimonials & Quotes

“Green space brings communities together in the most wonderful ways! A park will help support the people who already love and live in the area.” — Meg Kellogg

“Denver has enough infill... Look at congestion around Sloan's Lake. Make some open space.” — Don Gonzales

“A perfect place for a park that the community can enjoy and not a wasted resource-consuming area.” — GJ Chavez

“Denver has become a concrete jungle. The community needs open space to escape heat and connect with nature.” — Tonia McCulloch
